Street Theatre festival on digital addiction organised
-By Rani

A group of students from the Meetha bhai college organised a week-long street theatre festival called "Digitoll" at Shiva Auditorium, University of Delhi. The aim was to highlight the concern of rising digital addiction's effects on social and emotional life of people. Through entertainment, the street theatre conveyed the relevant message by engaging with the audience who shared personal stories and experiences related to digital addiction. Many local incidents were interwoven to convey the message. The aim of the festival was to change attitudes and behaviour. The idea of implementing daily reflections was also communicated which could help people fight the lure of digital engagement.

Wellness Workshop held
-Rita, student editor

The school's counselling department organised the event - Be-Do-Live WELL from 6 to 8 February from 10 AM to 6.30 PM at the community centre. It was a wellness workshop. The participants shared common concerns regarding mental well-being. Several experiences were related to work-related issues and relationship problems. While reducing stress was the key agenda, participants reported that the modern way of life had made stress an innate part of their life. The counsellors suggested implementing stress management techniques which could benefit them significantly. Many motivation strategies were adopted like sharing success stories which motivated the participants. They were advised to find joy in simple things in life and theatre in action provided an entertaining story highlighting the importance of mental well-being.

Cleanliness drive launched
-Rita, local correspondent

The Resident Welfare Association, Medipur launched a two-day cleanliness drive in the EWS Housing colony, Medipur in the first week of April. The initiative - Clean the Park Drive was aimed at engaging the colony children to become responsible towards their surroundings. Volunteers helped in picking and segregating littered papers, bags, food articles, etc. Some volunteers made posters which were put up on the roads leading to the colony. The organizers aimed at creating sensitization towards cleanliness. Street play on the importance of keeping the environment clean was staged in the evening. The drive gave out the message that residents must respect the environment and nature so that they can give a better future to the coming generations.
